IMPORTANT DECISION.

Carrier Circuit Court,
October Term, 1855.Joseph Bondurant, Plaintiff, vs.
The Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad, Judgment,
Company, and others, Defendants.

The Hon. W. M. Moore, District Judge, declining to preside in the case, Wm. H. Burns was selected as a special judge, who, after hearing the cause and argument of counsel, delivered the following written opinion, to-wit:

By an act of the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, approved January 9th, 1854, Chapter of Incorporation was granted to a company, called the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company, to build a railroad from Lexington to some point on the Ohio River, near the mouth of the Big Sandy river, and providing for the organization of said company, and for the mode of opening for subscription of stock, &c. (See act on file, 1854, page 79.)

The act authorized the company to issue bonds for the purpose of raising money to build the railroad, and to sell stock, and to borrow money, and to do all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act. The company, in pursuance of the act, issued bonds, and sold stock, and borrowed money, and did all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act.

Subsequently, an amendment was passed, increasing the powers of the company, and authorizing it to do all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act. The company, in pursuance of the act, issued bonds, and sold stock, and borrowed money, and did all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act.

The plaintiff, Joseph Bondurant, who was one of the subscribers for stock in the company, claims that the company has failed to carry out the objects of the act, and that he is entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company, claims that the company has carried out the objects of the act, and that the plaintiff is not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock.

The court, after hearing the arguments of counsel, delivered the following opinion: The company has carried out the objects of the act, and the plaintiff is not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The court, therefore, judgment in favor of the defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company.

The court, in its opinion, stated that the company had carried out the objects of the act, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The court, therefore, judgment in favor of the defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company.

The court, in its opinion, stated that the company had carried out the objects of the act, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The court, therefore, judgment in favor of the defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company.

The court, in its opinion, stated that the company had carried out the objects of the act, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The court, therefore, judgment in favor of the defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company.

The court, in its opinion, stated that the company had carried out the objects of the act, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The court, therefore, judgment in favor of the defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company.

It is to be noted that the act of the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, approved January 9th, 1854, Chapter of Incorporation was granted to a company, called the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company, to build a railroad from Lexington to some point on the Ohio River, near the mouth of the Big Sandy river, and providing for the organization of said company, and for the mode of opening for subscription of stock, &c. (See act on file, 1854, page 79.)

The act authorized the company to issue bonds for the purpose of raising money to build the railroad, and to sell stock, and to borrow money, and to do all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act. The company, in pursuance of the act, issued bonds, and sold stock, and borrowed money, and did all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act.

Subsequently, an amendment was passed, increasing the powers of the company, and authorizing it to do all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act. The company, in pursuance of the act, issued bonds, and sold stock, and borrowed money, and did all such things as might be necessary to carry out the objects of the act.

The plaintiff, Joseph Bondurant, who was one of the subscribers for stock in the company, claims that the company has failed to carry out the objects of the act, and that he is entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company, claims that the company has carried out the objects of the act, and that the plaintiff is not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock.

The court, after hearing the arguments of counsel, delivered the following opinion: The company has carried out the objects of the act, and the plaintiff is not entitled to a refund of the money he paid for the stock. The court, therefore, judgment in favor of the defendant, the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company.

Our Naval Expedition against Paraguay.

—The Difficulties.

A correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, who appears to understand the subject, thus details the difficulties to be encountered by the United States forces in carrying out the views of our Government by the intended expedition to Paraguay:

Much has been written lately in regard to a naval expedition, which is shortly to leave our shores for the purpose of enforcing the Rio de la Plata Convention, and of punishing the Republic of Paraguay. One would suppose, from the magnitude of the expedition, that the difficulties to be encountered by the United States forces in carrying out the views of our Government by the intended expedition to Paraguay:
